Council Fathers hear pleas for nuclear ban, reject missions draft

BY JAMES C. O'NEILL
VATICAN CITY - Pope John Paul II urged the Catholic Church to take a strong stance against nuclear weapons in his annual address to the Council of Cardinals meeting at the Vatican.

"We must not continue to build weapons of destruction," the Pope said. "We must work for a world without nuclear weapons."

The Pope's remarks came in response to a report from the U.S. bishops' conference, which called for a "nuclear freeze" and the elimination of nuclear weapons within a generation.

"The use of nuclear weapons is a sin," the Pope said. "It is a sin against the divine law of God, a sin against the human dignity of all people, a sin against the future of the human family."

The Pope urged the Council of Cardinals to consider the moral and ethical implications of nuclear weapons and to call for a halt to nuclear arms proliferation.

"We must not be silent when the world is in danger," the Pope said. "We must not be silent when the future of the human family is at stake."

The Pope's statement was met with a warm response from the Council of Cardinals, who expressed their support for the Pope's stance on nuclear weapons.

"We are pledged to work for a world without nuclear weapons," said Cardinal Joseph Cardinal, the secretary of the Council of Cardinals. "We are pledged to work for the denuclearization of the world."

"We are pledged to work for the peace of the human family," the Cardinal said. "We are pledged to work for the abolition of nuclear weapons."

Asks realistic steps to wipe out poverty

Charity to the poor stressed by Pontiff

by P. J. LUCIANI, JR.

VATICAN CITY — Pope Paul VI is expected to return to the theme of poverty in his presentation on Thursday of the special jubilee year of the poor. The theme of the Pope's presentation on poverty is "The Poor Among Themselves," which he is expected to discuss in his presentation on Thursday.

The presentation is the first of a series of six that will be given by the Pope during the year. The series is part of the Vatican's "Year of the Poor," which is being celebrated in 1974.

The Pope's presentation on poverty is expected to be the most important of the series, as it is the first time he has addressed the issue of poverty in a formal way.

Sees need to update our Catholic schools

The need to update our Catholic schools is becoming more urgent every day. The same holds true for schools in every other community today. But for our schools to stay alive, we must keep the faith in the schools alive.

The problem is this: our schools are not designed for the way we teach our children today. They are not designed for the way we teach our children tomorrow.

The answer is reform. The answer is change. The answer is not to abandon our schools, but to reform them. We must make our schools more efficient, more effective, more relevant, and more responsive to the needs of our children.

We must reform our Catholic schools to ensure that they remain a vital part of our community. We must reform them so that they can continue to provide a quality education for our children.

We must reform our Catholic schools so that they can continue to be a source of pride and joy for our community. We must reform them so that they can continue to be a source of inspiration and hope for our children.

Clergy ‘eloquent’

BY REV. ANDREW GREGERY

Good Counsel.

Durine the last year or two there has been a curious change in the attitude of the clergy in social and political question. Never before in this country was there a larger number of clergy who are expressing their opinions on various social and political questions. The change is due to a number of factors. One of the most important is the fact that the clergy are finding that they have a larger audience than ever before. They are finding that their opinions are listened to and that they have a responsibility to express them. The other factor is the fact that the clergy are finding that they have a larger audience than ever before. They are finding that their opinions are listened to and that they have a responsibility to express them.

It is interesting to note that the change in the attitude of the clergy is not confined to the United States. It is also happening in other countries. In England, for example, the clergy are finding that they have a larger audience than ever before. They are finding that their opinions are listened to and that they have a responsibility to express them. The other factor is the fact that the clergy are finding that they have a larger audience than ever before. They are finding that their opinions are listened to and that they have a responsibility to express them.

"Fail Safe" is faithful image of best-seller.

By JAMES W. ANSLOW

Swellers for Arnold's "Fail Safe" is a curious image of the London Times. In fact, the most faithful rendering of a novel ever seen for the screen was not necessarily a success. The novel "Fail Safe" was written by E. L. Doctorow, and the screen adaptation was directed by Norman Jewison, with a screenplay by Norman Jewison and David Ogden Stiers. The novel, however, was written in a different era, and the film's adaptation had to be updated to reflect the contemporary world in which it was made.

The novel "Fail Safe" was about the dangers of nuclear war and the potential for a catastrophic outcome. The film adaptation of "Fail Safe" was released in 1964 and starred Burt Lancaster, Richard Widmark, and James Mason. The film was praised for its powerful depiction of the dangers of nuclear war, and it was nominated for five Academy Awards, including Best Picture and Best Director.

The success of the film adaptation of "Fail Safe" helped to bring attention to the novel, which had received critical acclaim but had not been a commercial success. The novel was eventually made into a television miniseries in 1968, which was also well-received.

In the end, "Fail Safe" proved to be a timeless work that continues to be relevant today. The novel's message about the dangers of nuclear war remains as pertinent as ever, and its depiction of the potential for a catastrophic outcome remains a warning that should not be ignored.

VARIETY IN BOOKS

New marriage book wins reviewer's nod.

The Experience of Marriage by Andrew M. and Helen A. Brandt, published by Harper & Brothers, New York, 1944, 224 pages, $4.00.

This collection of essays on marriage that has been recently published by Harper & Brothers is a valuable contribution to the literature on the subject. The authors, Andrew M. and Helen A. Brandt, are well-known social workers and marriage counselors who have written extensively on the subject of marriage.

The book is divided into three parts: "The Place of Marriage," "The Problems of Marriage," and "The Practice of Marriage." Each part is further divided into several chapters, each of which deals with a specific aspect of marriage.

The authors approach the subject of marriage from a broad perspective, considering both the theoretical and practical aspects of the institution. They cover a wide range of topics, including the history of marriage, the role of marriage in society, the psychology of marriage, and the practicalities of living together.

The book is well-written and accessible, with a clear and logical structure. It is a useful resource for anyone interested in learning more about marriage, whether they are a student of sociology, a practicing social worker, or simply someone interested in the subject.

The book is highly recommended for anyone interested in learning more about marriage. It is a valuable resource that provides a comprehensive overview of the subject, and it is written in a clear and engaging style.

Pope sets precedent, addresses the council

VATICAN CITY—Pope Paul VI, heresy, said yesterday, in a televised address to the world, that the papal council must be an open and democratic institution, free from the influence of any outside power. The Pope's speech was seen as a sign of the growing influence of the Vatican in world affairs.

The Pope, however, did not say what form the council might take or when it would convene. He did say, however, that it was important for all religious leaders to work together for peace and understanding.

In his address, the Pope called for a new spirit of cooperation among Christians, and said that the council must be a forum for the discussion of current issues.

The Pope also spoke of the importance of the papal bureaucracy, which he said must be reformed to ensure that the council is free from corruption.

The Saint Paul Press Correspondence Service is committed to providing accurate and timely news and information to newspapers across the state. The service is proud to serve the news media in Minnesota and North Dakota, and looks forward to continuing to provide excellent service for years to come.
VARIATIONS IN MASS

Latitude in the liturgy

WASHINGTON—A new, simpler liturgy in the variations of the Mass can now be studied by the priests and Latin scholars who will be part of the 4th Latin American Conference on the Liturgy. The conference, which will be held in February, will focus on the implementation of the liturgical reforms of the Second Vatican Council.

The liturgy will be simpler in some areas, such as the prayers of the Lord and the Kyrie eleison, which have been shortened. The Gloria in excelsis Deo will also be shortened, and the Eucharistic prayer will be simplified.

The conference will include discussions on the implementation of the liturgical reforms of the Second Vatican Council, as well as the study of the liturgical texts and their translation into Latin.
