Interchurch first issue distributed

The first (June) issue of Interchurch, Indiana's new monthly ecumenical newspaper, was printed this week and mailed to subscribers as well as to more than 27,000 other persons whose names had been given to the Criterion Press, Inc., as potential subscribers.

The Criterion Press, a non-profit corporation which publishes The Criterion, is publisher of Interchurch. However, the unique venture in religious journalism, believed the first of its kind, is the editorial product of a broadly based collaboration among the Indiana Council of Churches, the Church Federation of Greater Indianapolis, and other state-wide Protestant, Orthodox, and Catholic churches and agencies.

The 24-page tabloid-size monthly's content is directed by clergy and laity of several denominations who comprise an editorial board and an advisory commission. John G. Ackel-mire, associate editor of The Criterion, is editor of Interchurch.

AMONG the features of the first issue, which is printed in color, is a two-page section devoted to a presentation of two opposing views on the question of liberalizing Indiana's abortion laws.

Dr. Irving Rosenberg, Indianapolis pediatrician and faculty member of the Indiana University School of Medicine, who co-authored the liberalized abortion bill passed by the 1967 General Assembly but vetoed by then-Governor Roger D. Branigan, presents the case for liberalization. Paul W. Phillips, prominent Fort Wayne lawyer, civic leader, and Episcopal layman, presents the case for not relaxing the existing abortion law. Phillips is state chairman of the non-denominational Committee for the Preservation of Life.

ALSO in the initial issue are a column on Fish, a help-your-neighbor movement, by Dr. Harold E. Frey, retired editor of Christian Century magazine and professor emeritus in Christian Theological Seminary, and a book review by Father Bernard Head, director of religious affairs at Marian College, Indianapolis, which is an entertaining and thoughtful analysis of "Forty-two Complaints," the controversial runaway best-selling novel by Philip Roth.

The issue also features a two-page communications section conducted by Rev. Thomas R. Stratton, program associate of the Church Federation, and dealing with radio, television, and films.

The mail subscription price of Interchurch is $2 a year. It also will be available at many church doors and at downtown newsstands at 25 cents a copy.

DRAFTED BY EDUCATORS

Vatican congregation asked to accept paper on academic freedom

WASHINGTON—A position paper containing strong endorsement of "autonomy" and "academic freedom" at Catholic colleges and universities has been submitted to the Congregation for Catholic Education in Rome by an international group of Catholic educators.

The document was released here in behalf of the U.S. delegation to the meeting by Father Clarence W. Friedman, executive secretary of the college and university department, National Catholic Educational Association, and through the office of Father Theodore M. Hesburgh, C.S.C., president of the University of Notre Dame.

Father Friedman also sent the statement to American bishops and presidents of U.S. Catholic colleges and universities, who were asked to comment on it. The statement has yet to be approved by the Vatican.

can congregation, but parties to the document predicted it would be, possibly next fall.

The statement was drawn up by a commission appointed by a conference on Catholic higher education, which met in Rome under Congregation auspices, April 25-May 2. The position paper was said to have been approved by all 31 delegates.

THE DOCUMENT bears a close resemblance to a statement drafted two years ago at conferences at Land O'Lakes, Wis., and Kinshasa, The Congo, sponsored by the International Federation of Catholic Universities.

"To perform its teaching and research functions effectively, the Catholic university must have a true autonomy and academic freedom," the statement declares. "It is limited by no other factor than the truth it pursues. Every limitation imposed on the university which would clash with this unconditional attitude for pursuing truth would be intolerable and contrary to the very nature of the university."

Other points in the statement:

• "The Church has the right and the responsibility to determine Catholic belief and to define Catholic moral principles. To this authority, all Catholics are subject, whether lay or cleric, preacher or theological scholar."

• "The theological scholar, in taking his place in the university, must be able to pursue his discipline in the same manner as other research scholars. . . . His work should normally be reviewed and evaluated by his scholarly peers, as is the case in other disciplines."

• "As an individual he is bound to accept the authentic teaching of the Church and to submit to its legitimately exercised authority. As a theological scholar he is bound by the nature of his discipline to take (Continued on page 7)

WEEK'S NEWS IN REVIEW

(NG-News Service)

Problems of heresy, racism and poverty were among last week's news highlights:

Cardinal Jean Danielou, a pioneer of the "new theology," warned that many Christians "would be scandalized" should the Church fail to take a stand against heretical ideas.

The Church, he emphasized, is "rigorously obliged" to condemn heresies when they arise.

"That does not mean to repress or limit research," he added, "but to exercise what is required by the Church's very responsibility."

A comprehensive Christian blueprint for eradicating racial conflict throughout the world, being thrashed out in London under the leadership of the World Council of Churches, itself ran into typical racist disruptions.

Roy Sawh, chairman of the British Black Power party and a consultant, upset the week's serious discussion when he walked out in a clash with Anglican Archbishop Michael Ramsey of Canterbury because Sawh claimed he could not have his say.

Father James Groppi, who has led civil rights demonstrations in Milwaukee, criticized Archbishop Ramsey for not displaying a readiness to listen to blacks. Backed by others, Father Groppi called for an apology, which Archbishop Ramsey graciously gave, and the entire incident, apparently due to misunderstandings, eventually was settled.

Meanwhile, the New York archdiocese rejected the National Black Economic Development Conference's "Black Manifesto" demanding $500 million in "reparations" from the nation's churches and synagogues to American Negroes.

"It is regrettable that in the 'Black Manifesto' these concerns are closely joined to political concepts which are completely contrary to our American way of life," declared a four-page statement issued by the archdiocese.

"On this basis, in addition to the manner of presentation and other substantive considerations," the statement declared, "we do not endorse the 'Black Manifesto' or its demands."

Addressing the joint convention of the Catholic Press Association and the Associated Church Press, Mrs. Martin Luther King, Jr., said financial preparation to black people "is too little to demand of churches."

The widow of the slain civil rights leader said "it was encouraging to note that some church groups resisted the impulse to evade the issue by concentrating on the provocative method of introducing the subject."

Msgr. Albert Busald to note 60th Jubilee

INDIANAPOLIS—The oldest active pastor in the Archdiocese will observe his 60th Jubilee of Ordination next Thursday, June 5, in the parish church he has served the past 35 years.

Msgr. Albert H. Busald, 85, will celebrate a Mass of Thanksgiving to mark 60 years in the priesthood at 7 p.m. in St. Philip Neri Church. A reception will follow in the school auditorium.

Special guests at the jubilee observance will include many of the 45 Archdiocesan priests who have served under Msgr. Busald at St. Philip's.

Unity service

MUNICH, Germany—The national heads of the Catholic and Lutheran churches in this country joined in an ecumenical prayer service held in a Lutheran church here. Attending were Cardinal Julius Döpfner of Munich, president of the German Catholic Bishops' Conference, and Lutheran Bishop Herman Dietzinger, president of the council of the German Evangelical (Lutheran) Church (EKD).

Since 1946 the parish has undergone several building improvement projects, adding to the church, rectory, convent and school facilities.

ordained priests and their pastors join Archbishop Schulte in celebrating the liturgy. The Archbishop is shown in the final photo after the services with the new priests, posed in the Blessed Sacrament Chapel of the Cathedral. From left are: Father John L. Fink, Father Michael D. Kattau, Father

Donald F. Haake, Jr., Father Michael K. Albright, Father Thomas Widner, Father Jeffrey Godek, Father Karl J. Mill, Father Charles L. Feld, Father Gerald J. Kirkhoff and Father Peter A. Adley. The ten priests received their first clerical appointments this week, to be effective June 11.

AT CPA CONVENTION

Jesuit, Methodist theologians weigh 'Crisis of Authority'

ATLANTA — Although they saw serious authority crises in both Protestantism and Roman Catholicism, two theologians said here that there is hope for a "creative" outcome from present tensions.

Speaking on "The Crisis of Authority," Father Walter J. Burghardt, S.J., of Woodstock, Md., editor of Theological Studies, and Dr. Albert Outler of the Perkins School of Theology, Southern Methodist University, addressed the joint convention of the Catholic Press Association and the predominantly Protestant Associated Church Press.

While they deplored the tendency of some critics to settle for nothing less than "instant" reform, both scholars saw a need for thorough changes in the churches. But they insisted that destruction of present structures without substituting something better could be disastrous.

Dr. Outler noted that "speaking kind words for Pops is not in my tradition," but he praised Pope Paul VI for being "deeply aware of the complexities of the current revolution" and "dogged in his own pattern of reform without ruin."

That Paul VI should, therefore, be crucified by both diehards and arsonists, and pilloried by his perfectionist critics, will one day stand as a sin against truth and charity," he said.

FATHER Burghardt, while critical of some Vatican actions and some papal statements, took to task those progressives who "seem to think of Pope Paul as 'Mr. Montini.'"

Even when a Catholic decides not to follow the guidance of the Pope or a bishop, he said, the decision must be made respectfully and only after careful consideration.

Dr. Outler said that Protestant churches are "fully involved in these upheavals," but have "had somewhat longer to get used to them."

"All our ancient patterns of adjudication are themselves being dissolved in the course of this current crisis," he said. "... the antinomian revolution has outrun what we had understood to be authoritative due process in policy and decision making."

With the old consensus which accepted rules of reason, law and civility "fading fast," he said, "we move toward the catastrophe when human rights will be equated with raw power and when, finally, the center will buckle under pressures from the extremes on either side."

He described the "Protestant establishment" as being "in acute distress."

"Most of our leaders are eager for reform," said Dr. Outler, "provided that their status quo isn't changed too drastically. And so they keep their power and their authority — to convince, inspire, command. The congregations struggle on, with enlarged budgets not matched by revenue; with intensified programs not matched by popular support."

But in spite of these developments, he observed hopefully that Vatican II discussed authority in terms of service to the community and balanced it with individual freedom which, like authority, is said to be derived from God.

FATHER Burghardt predicted that "the area of personal responsibility will be significantly broadened for the average Catholic," producing a wide variety of reactions. Some, he said, find "a breath of fresh air" in the new freedom and responsibility, while others see it as a "threat."

Dr. Outler added, "because these intellectual needs for the new, but built into their whole makeup is the older command of obedience relationship from which they cannot escape at all or only with inner violence."

"The decade to come will find the Catholic community increasingly divided on major issues," he said, "because so many of these issues are intimately linked to a conception of authority and its uses."

This division will exist, according to Father Burghardt, not only within the community as such but within the individual psyche—particularly within the man or woman who "wants" to change but "cannot."

Despite its pain, however, he said, "the contemporary crisis of authority can prove creative, need not be destructive."

IN CLOSING, he offered "a set of criteria that is desirable if its responsibility is to be more than another big word in the church—as much freedom as possible, only as much freedom as necessary."

Willfulness, on the part of the church, to risk misunderstanding and loss of support in its pursuit of justice.

● "The freedom to be wrong. Not for its own sake, but (in Cardinal Suenens' words) as a condition for an authentic search."

● "Dialogue before decision. ● Respect for law without enslavement to law."

● "Openness to new solutions."

"The answer, 'This is the way we've always done it,' proves only one thing: This is the way we've always done it," Father Burghardt concluded.

NURSING SCHOOL LEADERS—The four young women shown above served as senior class officers for the graduating class of St. Vincent's School of Nursing, Indianapolis. ## Pope, Cuernavaca bishop confer

VATICAN CITY—Pope Paul VI has received in private audience Bishop Sergio Méndez Arceo of Cuernavaca, Mexico. Bishop Méndez Arceo's case was the seat of two institutions that came under heavy fire from the Holy See: a dietine monastery where psychoanalysis was used as a real rule, and a training center for missionaries going into Latin America.

The abbot of the first, Father Gregoire Lemerle, and the rector of the second, Magr. Illich, have since left the priesthood.

College sit-in brings arrests

JERSEY CITY, N.J. — Three Catholic priests, two nuns, six teachers and 39 students were arrested at St. Peter's College here after refusing to obey a Superior Court injunction ordering them to end a sit-in at the Jesuit school.

The protesters are demanding that the college renew the teaching contract of Thomas Haessler, member of the theology faculty. They were released by the court on their own recognizance pending a hearing.

India Catholics ask 'practical' birth control

BANGALORE, India—India's "mini-Vatican council" has asked Pope Paul VI to suggest a "more practical method" of birth control in place of rhythm. A resolution—adopted by a workshop on the family at the 10-day council on "The Church in India Today"—asks the Pope and the Indian bishops to give consideration to the problems created by the encyclical Humanae Vitae.

It pointed out that in a situation in which the government pursues family planning, Catholic doctors, nurses and social workers have to struggle with their consciences and imperil even their professional careers. As citizens of a country that follows policies opposed to the encyclical, Indian Catholics stand to lose various privileges including maternity leave and free housing, the resolution added.

Challenges issued to religious press

ATLANTA — The editors and staff members of the religious press—Catholics and Protestants together—were told here that they must find new solutions to the problems of a rapidly changing society where religion is in danger of becoming "more and more marginal."

The new challenges were the theme of two speakers at the opening general session of the joint convention here of the Catholic Press Association and Associated Church Press, which is predominantly Protestant.

DR. W. C. Fields, president of the ACP, hailed the joint convention as "a breakthrough of the highest significance" which "will make history in religious journalism." But he warned that the status of religion and of the religious press may be changing not because religion "was refuted but because it became, to the secular mind, irrelevant, dull, oppressive and insipid."

Dr. Fields is editor of the Baptist Program and public relations secretary of the Southern Baptist Convention.

ARCHBISHOP Thomas A. Donnellan of Atlanta, welcoming the delegates, referred also to "challenges and difficulties. There are no easy answers," he said, "to a multitude of problems which face the religious press. . . . May I wish you God's blessing on your deliberations as you consider your opportunities and your responsibilities."

Msgr. Terrence P. McMahon of the Catholic Transcript in Hartford, Conn., noted in opening the convention that the joint meeting was an ecumenical first, "not only in the history of the religious press but also of religious organizations in America."

Sex education...

Last week Father James T. McHugh, director of the Family Life Division, United States Catholic Conference, minced no words. "The John Birch Society and other reactionary groups," he said, "are gravely irresponsible in promoting controversy over sex education."

His charge was supported by Paul Putnam of the National Education Association, and James E. Allen, the new U.S. education commissioner appointed by President Nixon.

Putnam said the Birchers are operating in 27 states, including Indiana, in a drive to abolish sex education in both private and public schools and are employing such tactics as abusive telephone calls and smut literature, using a front group called the "Movement to Restore Decency."

Allen said, "We found people coming around with literature—some of it the filthiest you have ever seen—saying it will be used in school."

The Birchers are claiming the Communists—who else?—are behind school sex education programs as a part of a conspiracy to overthrow the country. Their avowed intention is to get "sex education out of the schools and into the home, where it belongs."

We no longer really care what the Birchers say or do. In their 10-year existence they have proved themselves to be born losers, so out of touch with reality that—like the Ku Klux Klan's—their is the kiss of death to any politician they endorse. And, in fact, their current anti-sex education drive is more a matter of extreme rightist political activity at local levels than of any concern about parent-child relationships.

But we do care what the parents of Catholic school youngsters think about sex education. As Father McHugh acknowledged, some have been misled by isolated attempts at sex education by poorly prepared teachers and others have been misled by the propaganda of the Birchers and similar groups.

Perhaps Catholic parents will gain reassurance from a re-reading of the following paragraph from the 1963 pastoral of the American Bishops, "Human Life in Our Day":

"In accord with the Decree on Christian Education of Vatican II we affirm the value and necessity of wisely planned education of children in human sexuality, adapted to the maturity and background of our young people. We are under a grave obligation, in part arising from the new circumstances of modern culture and communications, to assist the family in its efforts to provide such training. This obligation can be met either by systematic provision of such education in the diocesan school curriculum or by the inauguration of acceptable educational programs under other diocesan auspices, including the Fraternity of Christian Doctrine."

There it is. The American Bishops know that most Catholic families need assistance in providing sex training, and that some of them need it desperately. What other conclusion is to be reached when so many children today think of "sex" as something in an all-too-available pornographic magazine, or some dirty word they learned in the school yard? What other conclusion is to be reached in a culture where so many illegitimate children are born to teen-agers and where gonorrhea and syphilis have become an alarming teenage health problem? If children are getting adequate education in human sexuality in the home, what is causing these problems in our society?

The Bishops know, and we know, that in far too many homes, Catholic and non-Catholic alike, children get scarcely any enlightenment about sex at all. What they learn, they learn in the streets or from pornography. This is the poorest sort of preparation for maturity. The Bishops want the job of sex education taken from the streets and smut peddlers and put into the schools, where a good and decent job can be done and is being done with the permission and co-operation of parents.

...and pornography

Only 11 of 111 motion pictures reviewed since January 1 by the National Catholic Office of Motion Pictures have been labeled suitable for the family. Father Patrick J. Sullivan, S.J., NCOPM director, reported last week. And only 25% of the films were deemed suitable for family or teen-age viewing.

In the area of the printed word no such precise yardstick as NCOPM's is available. But if one were, we feel certain the percentages would be even more deplorable by far. Printed pornography flows across the nation like the filth from a flooded sewer.

We wish there were an easy answer to this situation, but we know of none. Police censorship or any other sort of official censorship is out of the question. Wherever it has been tried—often in a spirit of decent desperation—it either has failed or the repressive "cure" has proved more offensive to human freedom and dignity than the malady.

Father Sullivan suggests that unofficial community pressurization of an organized group might work in the case of motion pictures. We have our doubts. There already has been a lot of that, and it scarcely has made a dent.

We do, however, share the belief of Dr. Eugene E. Levitt, chief of the psychology section of the Indiana University Medical School, that good sex education programs can lessen the effects of pornography. "If we helped our young people by eliminating the unnecessary mysteries of sex, we could eliminate much of the curiosity that makes a market for pornography," he says.

Dr. Levitt warns that one of the chief dangers of pornography is that so much of it leaves a grossly distorted notion among the ignorant and inexperienced as to what really goes on. Unrealistic depiction of eroticism and sexual athletics may leave young people with feelings of inadequacy that can blight marriage, he says. A sound sex education also can lessen this effect.

None of these observations will satisfy those who think they know how to make the world as pure and clean as the driven snow. But we are not addressing them, we are addressing those who know the world as it is and simply want to do what they can to make it a bit better.

Free college?

There is growing agitation in some partisan political camps for completely free university education. No tuition, no fees to speak of, just the minimal charge for textbooks now levied in public grade and high schools.

All the talk, we fear, is not altruistically motivated. Much of it is calculated to gain the support of up-and-coming electorates, the mass of college and university students dissatisfied with the system as it now operates, and often with good reason.

Nor do we think that "birthrights" can be equated to the National Endowment for the Arts, for example. A college education, free for the asking, would be a great thing. Unfortunately, it is not now economically feasible. Those promoting it argue from a platform of social upgrading and long-range tax returns, as well as individual rights. But in our view free college does not carry much weight on the scales of justice today.

We think hungry children, a degrading welfare system, blighted ghettos, and minority unemployment are much more important issues demanding national resources and resolve.

Nor do proponents seem to have considered what their proposal would do to the quality and vigor of higher education itself. First, it would wreck those privately-financed institutions which provide a primary service to students and a secondary one to society at large—a service of example and competition which goods all schools to seek the maximum in quality. Few of those institutions could survive. And the costs in those that did would be many times what they are now. They would become havens for a small wealthy elite. Given a likely erosion of quality in the free university, there would be proportionately far fewer educated adults than under the present system.

When the day comes that this nation can afford a quality higher education for all its citizens, the matter will demand much more thought and planning than is now put forward by supporters of free college.

Furthermore, we fear tantalizing students with hopes that are presently incapable of being fulfilled is only going to deepen resentment. Much of the unrest in the cities can be directly traced to lofty promises of the past eight years, promises which evaporated in congressional appropriations committees.

It is time now to speak only in practical terms and of goals that are within our reach.

• GEORGE SHUSTER'S VIEW

Mystery beclouds religion and science

By DR. GEORGE N. SHUSTER

I have a new electronic gadget which—if you wave it from the front seat of the car—will open the garage door. It is, to be sure, quite a commonplace little marvel. But it provides me with at least a scrap of insight into the incredible maze of instruments which make the space wanderings of astronauts possible. It is only a small symbol of what science can do.

The almost complete mastery of created energy which has now been achieved by science has, however, stirred up a great deal of anxiety and indeed in some instances downright uninhibited fear. The debate about the ABM has brought much of this into the open. Does the installation of such a system mean that all hope of nuclear disarmament has been abandoned? If that indeed be the case, can we halt any other kind of armament race, for instance, chemical warfare?

The awful scope of this anxiety about the nuclear holocaust does not prevent a good many other fears from taking on real dimensions. We are worried about pesticides, about the ill effects of wonder drugs, upon occasion, about methods of bringing about family limitation.

I allude to these fears because they point to the fact that relationships between science and religion must now be seen in a different light. The great conflicts of the past are no longer pertinent. In many of them the scientist had everything going for him. He could refer to the horrors done in the name of religion—Galileo vs. a very simplistic kind of Biblical exegesis, the Inquisition, witchcraft trials, the wars between protagonists of varying religious beliefs. He could also, so even before the area of superstition and declare that many religious assertions lacked verification. Khrushchev's famous crack about Russian supermen planes not coming across any souls up there is a case in point.

This approach was taken by many of my white friends and many non-friends.

The above statements about what happened at Cornell are odd. They are odd not because

Today when a great scientist comes to the end of his days and has a chance to look at the world he has helped to create, he is likely to come face to face with fundamental questions. I have been reading a good deal about this lately and would like to mention a book by Ronald W. Clark, JBS: The Life and Work of JBS Haldane. It is a most interesting account of the achievements and eccentricities of one of the most notable British scholars of his time.

Haldane was a geneticist with so many theories and discoveries to his credit that it is almost impossible to enumerate all of them. He also had a remarkable ability to talk about his subject so that an audience of non-specialists could understand what he was saying. But his individualism in social and political terms was quite as impressive.

Soldiering in the First World War, he could not let his patriotism in ingenuity and aggressiveness. He loved the business of killing and formed his first antipathy toward the Church of England because the chaplains did not seem to share his zest in battle. Later he became a radical critic of his government and at the height of his opposition to it joined the Communist Party, although his services to it were verbal only.

Gradually his admiration for Gandhi, following upon the discovery of other reasons for admiring India, led to his departure from England in order to share in the scientific progress of the country of which he was elected to become a citizen. He also became a devotee of the Hindu religion, though a somewhat skeptical one.

But the departure from his earlier mode of thinking was even more marked. He sensed the limitations of scientific inquiry and the need for a "total" philosophy about the worlds of man and nature. Indeed during his last days he felt once again a kinship with the Christianity which his ancestors and family had revered. It seemed to him then that Christ had been a far greater person than the record indicated.

Indeed, the realm of the holy, which is what religion is all about, is at least as unfathomable and mysterious as this realm of science. Modern man is quite as afraid of it as he is of the ABM and chemical warfare. I have known people, certainly not too wicked, who were afraid to visit the church where the Cure d'Arns had preached, lest his spirit would pervade the place and reveal their sins to themselves. Anyone who reads with the needed earnestness the lives and writings of Isaiah, Socrates and the Lord Jesus cannot well help feeling that an "abyss" of something wholly different has opened beneath his feet.

It seems to me that in the future the discussion which takes place between science and religion will be conducted at this level of inquiry. The awesome unexpected follows upon scientific discovery; and that "awesome unexpected" is what a miracle means. The "awesome unexpected" is likewise another definition of the miracle as conceived of in terms of Holiness.

• THE BLACK VOICE

What really happened at Cornell?

By REV. LAWRENCE LUCAS

The other day I read an interesting article written by Bayard Rustin, Executive Director of the A. Philip Randolph Institute. He was commenting on the Cornell University rioting of several weeks ago.

He pointed out that black people have known violence and have understood that "violence is synonymous with repression and destruction; therefore," he went on, "the use of guns on the Cornell University campus by a group of black students should come as a great shock—and a great sorrow—to all black Americans struggling for freedom and social justice."

Those black students were not interested in reforming the university. Otherwise, they would not have acted in such a way as to destroy the university.

This approach was taken by many of my white friends and many non-friends.

The above statements about what happened at Cornell are odd. They are odd not because they sound like white folks but because they make no sense. For years, I have been hearing people talking about how they agree with the black man's goals, how they would like to see gains in this regard as soon as possible, and how they would desire these just goals achieved non-violently. Then, in April 1969, in less than one week, all of these things took place. And white people are shocked and talking about "disgrace" and Bayard Rustin, an intelligent black man, is talking all about "violence" and "destroying the university"—none of which took place.

A great deal of the blame lies in what those television cameras saw and what they did not see; what reporters saw and wrote about in their papers and magazines and what they did not see and write about. Contrary to the news media, black kids did not first enter Willard Straight Hall with guns in their hands. They entered empty-handed. Twice white kids attempted to oust them by force and were turned back. When information was brought that white students were bringing guns on the campus only then did those black students leave and re-enter the building with some means of defense.

Some of the more blatant abuses already have been published; hole-in-the-wall pharmacies in Appalachia collecting to $250,000 or $300,000 a year; clinics and hospitals filling claims on patients long deceased or discharged; optometrists filling expensive prescriptions for the blind or persons with 20/20 vision; doctors signing blank prescription forms with nursing home operators filling them in; millions of dollars a year going for purely cosmetic surgery and dentistry.

Nor are some of the needy above corrupting the program, though in many cases they are more guilty of ignorance than fraud. Investigators have turned up stockpiles of drugs and medicines in sheds, prescriptions being refilled month after month for illnesses that no longer exist or never did. Some recipients took from doctor to doctor on whom or engage as many as four different doctors for simple ailments. They agree, sometimes coaxing, to get the most expensive care or hospitalization when minor medication would suffice.

They represent, however, only a fraction of the bad operators. Senator Russell B. Long (D., La.), chairman of the Finance Committee, says the great majority of abuses are committed by professionals in medical and allied fields, not by recipients.

One of the basic faults of Medicaid is that, unlike Medicaid, it does not have a contemplated white violence.

At Cornell, then, a handful of black students accomplished some goals that many whites "agree with while disavowing of their techniques." They did this in a few short days. Above all, they accomplished this "with no violence, with not one drop of black or white blood being spilled."

There was news. And the media—concentrating on responsible black students with guns and ignoring irresponsible white students with guns—missed it. Do you realize that at Cornell the whole pattern of "Negro progress" in this country was being put in jeopardy?

Scandals imperiling Medicaid

By JOHN G. ACKELMIRE

Scandals being uncovered in the Medicaid program are sickening. The Senate Finance Committee is now preparing a report on its investigations and special hearings are scheduled for this summer.

Some of the more blatant abuses already have been published; hole-in-the-wall pharmacies in Appalachia collecting to $250,000 or $300,000 a year; clinics and hospitals filling claims on patients long deceased or discharged; optometrists filling expensive prescriptions for the blind or persons with 20/20 vision; doctors signing blank prescription forms with nursing home operators filling them in; millions of dollars a year going for purely cosmetic surgery and dentistry.

Q. How can the institutional Church create sins for the damnation of human souls? How, for example, can the command at Mass, even for seven-year-olds, "under pain of mortal sin" be a sin? And how can the saying that eating meat on Ash Wednesday constitutes a serious sin? Pray, sir, if eating a ham sandwich on Ash Wednesday is a serious sin, what are we to make of blasphemy, murder, rape, incest and matters that really move men away from God? Any you contend to state merely that they are serious sins too?

A. No, sir, I am not. I sympathize with your agonizing, and I blame you for your condition upon the faulty religious instruction you must have received. A mortal sin is the full, deliberate choosing of one created good as a final end in preference to the Supreme Good which is God. A child of seven

He may know from his religious instruction that to miss Mass Sundays is a serious sin; he may even mistakenly, from faulty instruction, think that he is damned to hell because he missed Mass; but surely before God he is not old enough to make the ultimate decision required for mortal sin. A boy of twelve is capable of committing murder, but no jury would give him the same sentence it would give to a grown man.

The gravity of sin is measured by the extent of the disorder and aversion to God caused by the sin and the consequences and also by the dispositions of the sinner. When you get right down to it, sin is a failure to love God and fellow men. It is comparable, therefore, that neglect of Sunday Mass could be a greater sin than murder, if the neglect of the Sunday obligation were rooted in the love of God and the act of murder were the result of maddening anger.

Theologians today are having second thoughts about whether the Church can require the observance of her own laws under the pain of mortal sin. She can and should make laws regulating worship, the administration of the sacraments, the organization of her institutions, etc., and some of these can declare more serious than others. But it is hard to understand how the breaking of such rules could be more serious than the sins they are serious sins, they are so because they are failures to love under some other heading. Thus to miss Sunday Mass without reason could be a serious sin because it was an act of contempt for God or a serious contempt to one's children. In both cases love would be offended.

You will notice that what I am doing here is putting more stress on the motives, the circumstances and the relation to the law than the act itself. Moral theology attempts to do. It does not deny the necessity of law; it does not neglect moral principles; but it opposes the oversimplification of the recent past which described sanctity as keeping laws and sin as breaking them.

Q. I have been praying fervently for something for eight months. Lately I have been asking God if there is some penance I can do or sacrifice I can make to have this favor granted. Now I am wondering if I have committed some kind of sin in offering to bargain with God.

A. If we believe what Jesus said about God being a loving Father who is concerned about us and deeply involved in our welfare, this will give a certain tone and quality to our prayer. We will, in the first place, begin to pray as Jesus prayed. While he joined in the more formal prayer of the synagogue and used the customary formulas of Jewish prayer, he also slipped away from time to time to be by himself and talk to the Father in his own way.

Furthermore, Jesus prayed with a great deal of faith and confidence. If there were no immediate answer, he kept on praying. During his night of agony in the Garden of Gethsemane, Jesus prayed that his Father would take away his suffering. This prayer was not answered in the way Jesus wanted, but he was led from this experience to a higher kind of prayer: "Thy will be done." Here Jesus, as man, opened himself to God's power and activity in his life, realizing that the Father had a deeper purpose and a better answer to prayer in store for him than he was able to see at the time. And he was right. His prayer was finally answered with the glory of the resurrection.

No, Jesus did not bargain with the Father. Rather he entrusted his welfare to the loving care of the Father. He approached God confidently, and even though he did not receive the thing he asked for, he got something better.

We need faith to pray at all. Without it God would mean nothing to us. But we also need faith to recognize the answer to prayer when it finally comes. For us, as for Jesus, resurrection is sometimes the answer to the prayer of Gethsemane. But it takes faith to make the connection between the two.

I'm sure there was no sin involved in your turning to penance and sacrifice as a kind of bargaining point with God. This was, no doubt, a sincere effort to obtain the favor you wanted.

But I think you would find much more peace and security in Jesus's approach to prayer. Instead of punishing yourself in an effort to influence God, continue to pray readily and confidently. Then let your faith keep you alert to recognize God's answer to your prayer whenever and however it comes.

Q. I have recently been informed that a Catholic priest, new, with the approval of the Church, attend Sunday service in the Episcopal church rather than attending the Catholic Mass. True?

A. The Church now permits us to fulfill our Sunday obligation by attending the Orthodox Liturgy when we are in a place where it is not possible to attend Mass in a church of our own. I am not aware that this applies to Episcopal or Anglican Liturgies.

WHAT OF THE DAY

Nixon court choices will change nation

By REV. JOHN DORAN

The actions of President Nixon in choosing the successor to the retiring Chief Justice of the United States and Supreme Court Justice Fortas may well prove to be much longer and lasting and important in his career. Few things will affect the long-range destiny of the country as much as his choices for these vacancies and possible others which may well come up.

The President is evidently well aware of the damage done to the country by Gen. Eisenhower's great mistake in paying off a political debt by appointing Chief Justice Warren. He knows that the late President lived to regret this appointment bitterly, and to understand the harm he did to the country by this bit of political intrigue.

The Supreme Court of the United States is, as most real students of law will agree, out of hand. The court has taken to itself power which the Constitution turned over to the Congress, the power to make law. The court has done this by twisting the existing law into strange shapes in order to make the law say what the court wants said and done, with no regard to whether this was the original intent of the law or not. The court has seen itself as a supreme judge as to what is good for the country, not a judge as to the legality and application of the laws of the land, which is what it was intended to be.

When the court took over this role it was the supreme legislator it pushed aside the wisdom of the founding fathers, who knew that the legislators of the law should be subject to the will of the people. The Constitution provides that those who make the laws for the people shall have to face those same people at stated times, and ask the people whether they approve of the laws made and the actions taken. Every two years the members of the House of Representatives must go before the people and ask whether those people like what they have done or not; every six years the senators must do the same. These provisions were built into the constitution to force the lawmakers to be subject to the will of the people for whom they make the laws.

No such provision is written into the Constitution for the judges of the Supreme Court because the founding fathers did not envision the judges as lawmakers. They considered the members of the Supreme Court as law interpreters, and felt that lengthy years of service would make these judges better and better at the work of interpretation.

When the judges of the Warren court shifted over to torturing and reasoning in order to force interpretation into actual writing of new laws, they made themselves into lawmakers who are not subject to the people, and who never have to face the electorate and ask the people to express their approval or disapproval. They thus became as bad as the people as absolute monarchs or dictators ever were. This our Constitution never envisioned.

The men whom President Nixon will appoint to the Supreme Court will have the chance to reverse this trend. By using his power of appointment, President Nixon can restore the court to its original position, and thus end an imbalance which has plagued the country for many years now. The would-be one of the most important and stabilizing actions which he will have a chance to perform in his whole Presidency.

YOUR WORLD AND MINE

Nixon widens gulf with Latin America

By GARY MACEOIN

As a Presidential candidate last fall, Mr. Nixon was alarmed by the "already ominous gulf" widening at an alarming pace between a prosperous North America and a backward Latin America. His solution formulated by him last month and elaborated more recently by his associates guarantees an acceleration of the pace of widening of that gulf.

It is now clear that Mr. Nixon has embraced wholeheartedly the policy of abandoning Latin America to the robber barons, a policy initiated with little fanfare by his predecessor. The Alliance for Progress has been officially buried, our pledged word as a nation swept casually under the rug.

Any doubts the Latin American may have had were dispelled when a Rockefeller was named as our imperial envoy to negotiate unspecified deals throughout the region. The military despots rejoiced and the people shivered.

It is not only that this name is historically associated with the most ruthless period of the exploitation of the poor by the rich. It still today speaks for the international oil empires which prefer their economic power to the law courts for resolving disputes. Those people of rich provinces were quick to repeat one of the most stinging in the Spanish tongue: "to mention the rope in the home of the hanged man. And without resorting to provocation at all, Bishop Maricovich Fleitas of Paraguay last week described the foreign policy of the United States as "a policy without justice or charity."

The Nixon decision to turn back "development" in Latin America to private enterprise, a decision further clarified by a warning from a subordinate that private capital goes only where its rights are "respected," must be seen in the context of the collapse of American military and economic policy on the Asian mainland. We are thrown back to the "Fortress America." Our strategists need its resources and our businessmen its markets to maintain their respective versions of normalcy.

Since World War II, the United States has dominated the economy of Latin America. Contrary to widespread belief, handouts by us during this period have represented an infinitesimal part of our dealings, and they have effectively stopped for years.

Here are actual figures: Between 1951 and 1963, net movement of capital from the United States to Latin America was $6.9 billion, while that in the other direction was $11.9 billion—a loss of $5 billion by Latin America. Things have since got worse. The external debts of governments and private borrowers have doubled in the last eight years to close to $20 billion. The outflow of profits and interest to foreign investors and lenders rose last year to 26 percent of the region's entire export income.

A United Nations investigating committee recently reported unemotionally that "the situation is thought to be approaching the breaking point." While the rich in Latin America get richer, the poor get poorer. It is they who are approaching "the breaking point," and there is absolutely no place in the Nixon policy for any social reform in Latin America.

We have already reached a pre-Vietnam situation in half a dozen countries, from Guatemala to Brazil, with United States arms and "advisers" postponing the breaking point. The slow progress of the Vietnam peace talks will mean that no significant number of troops will be withdrawn for a year, and by then it may be necessary to move them directly to the trouble areas to the south of us. That would make perfect sense for our strategy planners, but it overlooks one decisive new factor. The college unrest, now spreading to the high school, is a signal that America's youth is not going to die to support injustice at home or abroad. That is the factor overlooked in the Nixon policy for Latin America. If we persist in it, we are going to have not only revolutions throughout the hemisphere but civil war at home.

Perhaps we should see this prospect less as a threat than a promise. That is how it looks to one of the prophets of the day, Archbishop Helder Camara of Recife, Brazil. "Youth will not tolerate an estranged society," he says, "because young people nearly always see further and deeper than adults, and they regret that so many fathers, teachers, writers and politicians persist in flying in the face of history."

THE GOOD SEED . . . "The kingdom of heaven is like a man who sowed good seed in the field. One night, while everyone was asleep, the enemy came and sowed weeds among the wheat, and went away. When the plants grew and the heads of grain began to form, then the weeds showed up. The man's servants came to him and said, 'Sir, it was good seed you sowed in your field; where did the weeds come from?' 'Do you want us to go and pull up the weeds?' they asked him. 'No,' he answered, 'because as you gather the weeds you might pull up some of the wheat along with them. Let the wheat and weeds grow together until harvest, and then I will tell the harvest workers to pull up the weeds first and tie them in bundles to throw in the fire; then gather in the wheat and put it in my barn.' 13 Matthew 24-30.

PLEAS FOR SCHOOLS

Plea for schools

To the Editor:

Many people express serious worry. CCD teachers included. That one hour a week is not enough time for young students to learn religion. And it seems that the better educated the parents are in the Faith, the more they realize this fact. Many are concerned about the outside influences in the home today because it makes it so difficult to maintain a solid spiritual influence for the children.

Adult religious education helps, of course, but unless more can be done to oblige aid to our schools, many parents will have to face seeing religious values slip away for their children.

It is hard to believe that this affluent social justice age, responsible Catholic parents find such conditions visited upon their children. Many Catholic parents can feel the heat of unreasoning anger against them when some Indiana lawmakers insist that it violates our Constitution to grant any aid to non-public, grade and high schools. Is it reasonable that these same lawmakers were willing to provide tax exemptions for contributions to private colleges in the state? They could not see a question of constitutionality in the case of colleges. How are grade schools, and the most fixed lawmakers against tax exemptions to non-public grade and high schools, was the sponsor of that bill to give exemptions to private colleges. Over the protest of the lawmakers, our needed bill did pass, but was vetoed by the Governor. That bill would have hardly touched on the real need, but it would have been a start.

Twenty-six states have already passed Fair Bus Bills, but our Legislature defeated that bill again. The financial crisis has deepened greatly for our schools and for many non-public schools in the state. Surely Catholic citizens in Indiana will not allow one of the best and strongest Catholic systems in the nation, established by our laboring forefathers, to slowly slip away? We owe it to the Faith and our children and their memory to make the enormous sacrifice necessary to sustain and keep our school system.

'Old time' music

To the Editor:

It's really kind of funny sometimes, at least at our church. I mean, everyone looks "just great" all decked out in Sunday attire, filling into the pews. Lo and behold! As the time approaches for all to join in song, I think it best that all God's children be seen rather than heard from our lips. I mean, the moderator, seems to be in harmony. And to think we even rehearse these hymns before the Mass begins!

Let's face it—"Faith of Our Fathers" and countless other new hymns being sung just don't "turn us on" like the good old classics. There was a time when our eyes would fill with tears as we'd sing "To Jesus Heart All Burning," or our hearts fill with joy as "On This Day O Beautiful Morning" would pass from our lips. I mean, everyone welcomes a change here and there, but must we wipe the slate clean?

Incidentally, does anyone remember "Blue Suede Shoes"?

Sheed to keynote

Wanderer Forum

ST. PAUL, Minn.—Dr. Frank Sheed, internationally known Catholic scholar, will be keynote speaker for the fifth National Wanderer Forum here, June 20-22.

Sheed, one of the few laymen to hold a honorary doctorate in sacred theology from the Holy See, will speak on "The Roots of Our Faith."

Theme of the forum is a statement by Pope Leo XIII: "When a society is perishing, the true advice to give to those who would restore it, is to recall it to the principles from which it sprang."

The forum will feature sessions and talks upholding Catholic teaching and fidelity to the Pope, and will answer attacks upon Catholic loyalty, according to church officials.

Other speakers will include Brent Bollert, editor of Triumph magazine; Paul Scott, syndicated Washington correspondent and columnist; and several educators.

Latin Masses are planned for each day of the forum.

MURRUNDI, N.S.W. Australia

A medal of St. Christopher, the patron of travelers recently removed from the Catholic calendar of saints, was blamed for an automobile accident here.

The driver of the car, which roared through the main street of Murrundi at full speed before crashing into a tree, had had fallen from the dashboard and become wedged under the accelerator, jamming it at the full speed position.

THE HOLY FATHER'S MISSION AID TO THE ORIENTAL CHURCH

TORN LIVES...

Ripped apart by war in the Holy Land. Most are children. Others are sickly, aged, handicapped. The rest are farmers without land, dignity without work. All cling to the shreds of dignity. Each seeks a chance to begin anew. A hot meal, a blanket, a tent, a few tools for the breadwinners, schooling for the children—any of these can start whole families toward piecing their shattered lives together again.

There are now more than 1,500,000 refugees from the continuing fighting in the Holy Land—and the number increases daily. Some have already worked their way out of poverty. Some are cared enough to train them for new jobs, or help school their children, or piece together shattered families. But most are still huddled in open camps, or town slums, or crowded in with relatives equally poor. The refugee colonies teem with destitution and a poisonous sense of futility.

Through the Holy Father's Pontifical Mission for Palestine, the Catholic Near East Welfare Association has already minded tens of thousands of refugee families through education, new jobs, new housing, medical and orphan care, food, clothing. Any kind of helping hand is eagerly grasped by those eager to help themselves.

Choose the gift you can afford to repair any of these torn lives. Mail the coupon today.

St. Simon, Holy Name share track honors

INDIANAPOLIS—St. Simon's and Holy Name parishes captured the overall championships in the Cadet Boys' and Girls' Track and Field Meets, respectively, as both were concluded last week.

For the lads from St. Simon's parish, it was the second consecutive overall team title. The boys' meet was concluded on Wednesday, May 21, after the meet was partially rained out the previous Sunday. St. Simon's amassed 97 points in the championship, followed by St. Pius X with 81 points, St. Rita's with 60 points, and St. Ann's with 59½ points.

ST. RITA'S emerged on the top of Class A competition with 44 points. In so doing they set a new record for the 880-yard relay event. Pat Brennan, of St. Philip Neri, set the individual 880-yard record with a 2:15.4 time.

It was St. Simon's in Class B with 37½ points. An unusual time was recorded in the 440-yard run by Don Strack, of Holy Name, and Dave McDowell, of St. Philip Neri. The time was 6:16, only one-tenth of a second off the record.

St. Simon's also captured the Class C competition with 48½ points. In that category, St. Lawrence 400-yard relay team established a new meet record of 59.2. The 200-yard shuttle relay team from St. Simon's tied the 28.7 meet record.

Double wins were recorded by Jeff Keen, of St. Joan of Arc, in the 220-yard and 100-yard dashes of Class A, and Derrick Colbert, of Holy Angels, in the same two events in Class C.

A record number of 1,230 individual and 131 relay teams from 25 parishes participated in the boys' meet.

IN TAKING THE Girls' Track and Field Meet championship trophy, Holy Name accumulated 69 points, rather closely followed by Holy Spirit with 57, and St. Pius X with 52.

By classes, St. Pius X took Class A competition with 31 points; Holy Name in Class B with 30; and St. Malachy's, Brownsburg, in Class C with 27 points.

New records were set by Holy Angels in Class B, with a 440-yard relay time of 59.5, and by St. Pius X in Class C, with a 440-yard relay time of 63.1.

A double win was recorded by Robin Pullings, of Holy Angels, for the 50 and 100-yard dashes in Class A.

The record number of entries included 835 individuals and 117 relay teams from 17 parishes.

New Supervisor announced for School Office

INDIANAPOLIS—A new Archdiocesan School Office Supervisor was announced this week by Father George Elford, who does a Superintendent of Schools.

Sister Joseph Therese Beach, S.P., will succeed Sister Ann Patrick McNulty, S.P., who has held the position the past two years.

The new supervisor, a native of Dayton, has 20 years' experience in teaching and administration. For the past five years she has served as principal of St. John the Baptist School, Fort Wayne.

Sister Joseph Therese is a graduate of St. Mary-of-the-Woods College and Cardinal Strickland College, Milwaukee, where she obtained a master's degree in education as a reading specialist.

Sister Ann Patrick has received a fellowship to the Education Intervention Specialist Program at Indiana University, where she will pursue doctoral studies.

CYO Spring Sports program winding up

INDIANAPOLIS—Cadet and Junior Spring Sports are nearing completion this week with playoffs scheduled in the Cadet Kickball League and the Cadet Baseball League. Junior Kickball League title was decided in games held last week.

St. Malachy's, of Brownsburg, captured its first championship in the Junior Kickball League by eliminating St. Roch's in the final game 9 to 5. A five-run rally in the sixth inning won the game for Brownsburg.

Dullaghan named coach at Chatard

INDIANAPOLIS—Father Gerald A. Gettelinger, principal of Chatard High School, has announced the appointment of Dick Dullaghan to coach the school's football and wrestling team.

Dullaghan has served as an assistant football, wrestling and baseball coach at Chatard for the past three years. He succeeds Carol Purichia, who recently resigned to accept the position of assistant football coach at the Indiana State University, Terre Haute.

As a player, Dullaghan was a halfback at Cathedral High School and Butler University. He was named to the All-CCC conference team for three consecutive years. He was also selected the team's most valuable player in his junior and senior years and received the Hilton U. Brown award for mental attitude.

For the second-place south-siders, it was the second consecutive runner-up trophy after five consecutive league championships.

Advancing to the finals, St. Malachy's (Division I) defeated Holy Spirit (Division IV) 13-6. Holy Spirit was the defending league champion. St. Roch's (Division III) defeated St. Lawrence (Division II) by a decisive 25-10 count. St. Lawrence had previously eliminated St. Matthew's in a division playoff 25-18.

In the Cadet Kickball League, final games were scheduled after press time this week. Christ the King (Division II) defeated St. Catherine's (Division III) 28-16 to advance to the championship game. St. Catherine's was the winner of the St. Malachy's (Division I) and St. Simon's (Division IV) game.

St. Catherine's was to meet the lower of the St. Malachy's and St. Simon's game for the consolation trophy.

In the countdown for the Cadet Spring Baseball League championship, St. Michael's in Division I was the sole survivor at this writing. Our Lady of Lourdes is leading in Division II with one game remaining, while Holy Name leads in Division III with two games left.

Division III drew the bye for the final round. Winners in Divisions I and II played yesterday (Thursday). The championship game is scheduled tentatively at 2 p.m. Sunday, June 1, at Chatard High School.

Review

Archbishop Philip M. Hannan of New Orleans told religion newsmen that besides professional competence, the religious press must have "a prophetic character." He told 600 delegates at the Atlanta meeting that "preaching the word of God means supporting decent housing, racial justice, adequate education, equal employment opportunities."

Back in London, the English bishops' Commission for International Justice and Peace called on every individual in Britain and on the British government in particular to give 1% of their income to fight world poverty.

The commission asked all dioceses, parishes, church institutions and groups of all kinds to devote for this purpose 1% of their incomes by 1972.

It cited an example set by Pope Paul VI in the sale of surplus Church property and the establishment of a Populorum Progressio Fund. It urged the Church in this country to examine its own property and possessions to discover what may be surplus to its needs.

Bishop James A. McNulty of Buffalo made his first appearance before the three-year-old diocesan Priests' Senate and addressed the organization until fall.

His action prevented an anticipated senate discussion of a personnel board proposed to aid in the assignment of priests. Bishop McNulty is reportedly cool to this idea.

Also expected was discussion over the resignation of Father Gerald R. Fortin May 12 as editor-in-chief of the Magnificat, diocesan newspaper. Father Fortin's resignation was sought by Bishop McNulty after the two differed over editorial policy.

Happiness is: St. Mary Center

By PAUL G. FOX

"Swingin' Thru the Seasons" will be the theme of the spring program to be given by the children of St. Mary's Child Center next Sunday and Monday.

Two performances of the program, featuring 19 youngsters at the special education center, will be given at 3 p.m. Sunday, June 1, and 8 p.m. Monday, June 2, both in the auditorium of St. Mary Academy, 429 E. Vermont Street.

According to the director, Sister Mary Gerald, O.S.F., it will be a delightful hour of song and dance. "The talented performers easily qualify for the Ed Sullivan Show," she commented.

NAMES IN THE NEWS—Father Lawrence Frey, pastor of St. Gabriel's parish, Indianapolis, is in Winona Memorial Hospital this week following gall bladder surgery there.

Two new priest-graduates of Marian College this past Tuesday returned to their alma mater to offer a Mass of Thanksgiving in the college chapel. Father Thomas Widner, ordained last Saturday by Archbishop Schulte, and Father Edward Dondini, ordained for the Lafayette diocese, were the third and fourth Marian grads receiving holy orders since the college became co-educational in 1954. . . . James P. Knapp and Raymond G. Knapp, brothers from Indianapolis, recently received bachelor of arts degrees from Walsh College in Canton, O. They are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Knapp. . . . Miss Jacqueline Huggins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Huggins, Jr., of Indianapolis, has received a bachelor of arts degree from Mt. St. Scholastica College in Atchison, Kan. . . . Sister Rose de Lourdes Rogers, O.S.F., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ora H. Rogers of Holy Name parish, Beech Grove, will observe her 25th Jubilee in the religious life Sunday, June 8, with a Mass of Thanksgiving at 4 p.m. in Little Flower Church, Indianapolis. An open house will follow in the Little Flower School cafeteria. . . . Charles E. Stimming, past president of the Archdiocesan Council of Catholic Men and a member of St. Joan of Arc parish, Indianapolis, has been elected as vice president of the Community Service Council board of directors. . . . Father Joseph Laugel, pastor of St. Mary's parish, Greensburg, was honored last Thursday at his parish on the occasion of his 25th anniversary of ordination to the priesthood. A Mass of Thanksgiving was followed by a reception in the parish hall. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Vincent D. Corrigan, members of Our Lady of Lourdes parish, Indianapolis, will observe their 50th Wedding Anniversary on Wednesday, June 4. They have one daughter, Mrs. Rosemary Denahue.

AROUND AND ABOUT—David A. Bayse, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Bayse of Little Flower parish, Indianapolis, has been selected as one of America's Outstanding College Athletes for 1969. His name and biographical sketch will be presented in the annual biographical compilation sponsored by the sponsoring organization. The Latin School graduate is a student at St. Meinrad College.

The athletic teams at Roncalli High School, Indianapolis, will be known as the "Rebels." Roncalli is the new name for the merged Chartrand and Kennedy Memorial High Schools, to be combined next fall at the Chartrand campus on Indianapolis' southside. . . . The St. Dismas Society at the Indiana Little Flower Center, Pendleton, had a special guest this month for a program—Freddie Agabashian, well-known competitor at the Indianapolis "500" Mile Race. . . . St. Simon's School, Indianapolis, has obtained a new, 66-passenger bus largely through the donation of trading stamps. Mrs. Joseph English, campaign chairman, had the gratifying experience of The Criterion who contributed trading stamps. . . . The 1944 graduation class at Little Flower School, Indianapolis, will gather on Saturday, June 7, for a 25-year reunion. An open invitation is extended to classmates, spouses, friends and parents to the reunion.

Mass, to be offered at 6 p.m. on that day in Little Flower Church. Dinner for the 69 members of the class will follow at Mike's Round Table, 38th and Sherman Drive. Mrs. Frank Klinkow, Jr., 356-2554, is in charge of dinner reservations. . . . Well, it almost happened, but not quite. For the first time since Marian College went co-educational in 1954, this past semester there was a "male majority" in the senior class. The senior class roster listed 84 men and 83 women, but by the time the commencement count was made for Sunday's graduation, the women zoomed ahead by 10.

PERFECT BATTING AVERAGE—In these days of stiff competition among teachers for coveted summer studies programs, Father Harold Kneuev of the Latin School reaped an unusual three-for-three average on his applications to various institutes and projects. The social studies instructor received letters of acceptance from the 13th annual Conference on American Studies at DePaul University, the Implementation Institute on Innovative Social Studies Curricular Materials for Geography and Anthropology at Kalamazoo, Mich., and the 1969 Summer Robert A. Taft Institute of Government at Indiana State University. He will accept the latter two offerings. During the past two semesters, Father Kneuev has attended a special series of Saturday morning classes offered by Indiana University, Indianapolis.

Sister Mary Carol gets fellowship

INDIANAPOLIS—Sister Mary Carol Schroeder, professor and chairman of the history department at Marian College, has received a faculty fellowship from Hamline University, of St. Paul, Minn., for an institute on South and Southeast Asia. The institute will be held at the university from June 16 to July 11.

The fellowship is one of 29 that have been awarded college faculty members from 16 states. Participants were selected on a competitive basis for the awards which include tuition, travel, board and room.

Purpose of the program is related to the concern that American liberal arts college curriculums tend to slight world civilizations beyond Europe and that emphasis on non-Western areas is only beginning in many cases.

into proper account the pronouncements of the Church. However, his relationship to ecclesiastical and religious authorities will vary in accordance with the types of Catholic universities.

"IN A UNIVERSITY without relationship with ecclesiastical or religious superiors, these authorities may deal with the theologian as an individual member of the Church. If they can make representation to the institutional authorities, any juridical intervention in university affairs must be excluded. In other institutions provision is made for appropriate action by designated ecclesiastical or religious superiors. In all cases, however, any action taken by ecclesiastical or religious superiors should conform exactly to their authority as established in the university statutes, and should be carried out according to those procedures of due process established in the statutes and recognized as general university common law in the geographical region of the particular university."

The document says that although members of a Catholic university "constitute a special sort of community," they "are subject to episcopal authority in the same way as any parish."

It adds, however, that "since the members of this community and its common interests are of a different style of Christian living should be appropriately different. Hence it is important that the relevant episcopal authority recognize this difference and not only allow for it but encourage it. The university community is especially appropriate for authorized experimentation, particularly in the ways to make Christianity more relevant to their lives."

THE DOCUMENT states: "Since a university usually transcends the limits, the needs, and the conditions of a single diocese, it might be well to establish a bishop or a group of bishops for the university ministries—as is often done for the military and naval forces. In any case the designated episcopal authority in directing the university ministries, both in Catholic and other type institutions, should rely on the advice of men trained in universities and experienced in the university ministry."

Father Hesburgh who attended the conference in an ex officio capacity as President of the International Federation of Catholic Universities, said that although the document has not been formally accepted by the Congregation (formerly called the Congregation for Seminaries and Universities), its prefect, Cardinal Gabriel Garrone, has "welcomed" the statement.

"All the delegates were impressed with the earnestness of the Cardinal and the other members of the Congregation in their efforts to become informed about the problems of Catholic higher education. The exchange of viewpoints helped all of us," Father Hesburgh said.

IN ADDITION to Father Hesburgh and Friedman, other delegates representing America's 40 Catholic universities at the Rome meeting were Father Robert J. Henle, S.J., academic vice-president of St. Louis University and president-designate of Georgetown University; Father Neli G. McCuskey, S.J., dean-director of the Institute for Studies in Education at Notre Dame; Msgr. John J. McGrath, president of Saint Mary's College, Notre Dame, Ind.; Father Michael P. Walsh, S.J., president of Fordham University; and Brother Gregory Nugent, F.S.C., president of Manhattan College, New York. N.Y. Daniel L. Schlafly, chairman of the St. Louis University board of trustees, was an alternate delegate. Other delegates came from Europe, Africa, Latin America, the Far East and Asia.

Indiana's Knights of St. John crusade for retarded children

By JEFF HAYS

Southern Indiana schools for retarded children are thousands of dollars better off because of the "new purpose" of Indiana's Knights of St. John.

Back in 1965 a small group of progressive-thinking knights took a hard look at their organization and decided it needed a shot in the arm.

These knights felt that if their activities were for the benefit of a worthwhile charity, it would give real meaning to their organization. They decided that retarded children in the state were in real need of this help and would make a very appealing nudge for Knights of St. John members. HEADED by Evansville's John Triplett, Tom Ziliak and Alvin Koresell, this group convened the 1965 grand convention in Indiana to make retarded children the No. 1 charity much like crippled children is the charity of the Shriners.

Moreover, they adopted a resolution that each parish commandery hold one fund-raising event a year for retarded children. In addition, all the commanderies would hold one joint regional fund-raising affair or the same cause.

The results have been beyond the most optimistic dreams of the originators.

When Triplett, Ziliak and Koresell

Two faiths sign pact on baptism

VIENNA, Austria—The re-baptism of converts to Catholicism or Lutheranism will no longer be required in Austria, according to an agreement between the denominations in this country.

The agreement was signed by Auxiliary Bishop Jakob Weinbacher of Vienna, secretary of the Austrian Bishops' Conference, and Lutheran Bishop Oskar Sakrasky. It stipulates that the baptism of persons in either faith will be recognized in the case of conversions.

The agreement provides, however, that in the case of any doubt concerning the validity of a convert's original baptism, the respective clergymen of both denominations will consult each other on the matter.

essel handed the proceeds of the regimental benefit dance held recently to Evansville's Marian Day School, it brought the grand total of Knights contributions to that school to some $8,000 in less than four years.

The fifth regiment, comprising most of Southeastern Indiana, has been just as successful. That group reported to Indiana's grand convention in April more than $2,300 in contributions to various schools throughout their regiment.

HOW DO the Knights raise the money? Triplett says almost everything has been tried by the commanderies—white elephant sales, card parties, rummage sales, bus trips, dances and dinners.

"Some have been flops, but overall we've come out with a profit," Triplett beamed. "Not only in money but in giving the members a real worthwhile purpose as an organization."

Marian Day School has been the main beneficiary for the Sixth Regiment (Southwestern Indiana), but several schools have benefited in Southeastern Indiana. Among them are Harrison County Retarded Children School in Lanesville and Greenacre Retarded Children School in Richmond and Westwood Elementary school, Batesville.

If Triplett and the other Indiana Knights have their way, the Indiana Knights will become a nationwide Knights of St. John program.

They presented this Hoosier project at the national convention last year. The decision of the national delegates was to endorse the project and to adopt the project nationwide.

Indiana's results have been good—both in getting much needed money for the retarded schools, and, as Triplett says, giving new spirit to an old organization.

VIEWING WITH ARNOLD

"Goodbye, Columbus" is cinema bomb

By JAMES W. ARNOLD

"Goodbye, Columbus," the current event terrible on the film scene, tries to be smart, sexy and relevant all at once, a blunderbuss aimed right at the heart of the box-office. The question is whether there is enough relevance to carry the burden of all that sass and spice.

This is the classic story of the romance between the poor boy and the spoiled rich girl, told in the ironic, funny-sad style of the hip young modern; it is also a wry and eventually slashing attack on the girl's social milieu, the new rich Jews who inhabit the country clubs, estates and tennis courts of Westchester. It is nasty enough that, if all its major creators were not Jews themselves, it would set off justifiable roars from the Anti-Defamation League.

The central issue is whether Neil Klugman (Richard Benjamin), a gentle Jewish idealist who is not so intellectual as to be immune to the charms of super-Golden Girl Brenda Patimkin (super-publicized new comer Al MacGraw), will succumb to the whole empty-headed materialist bag she comes wrapped in. A deft twist at the end relieves him of his decision, and shows that the bonds of family, especially a rich family, are stronger than Romeo and Juliet thought.

In the process, the movie touches several currently raw nerves, especially the conflict between the generations, in which the young condemn the acquisitive business morality of the old, and the old condemn the swinging sexual morality of the young. Here is the middle class way of life, in all its glitter and excess, pitted against its rising young critics. The clash of values (physical vs. intellectual, conforming vs. non-conforming, thing-oriented vs. person-oriented) echoes the conflict over the heart-of-the-Good-Life at the heart of the so-called campus revolts.

Nearly all of this content, including most of the essay dialogue, comes directly from Philip Roth's celebrated short novel. So does the touching sequence of the little Negro boy who comes to the library to pore over Gaudin's pictures of the unstable beauty of Tahiti—he is a symbol of Neil, a dreamer in love with beautiful images.

Differences from the novel, however, are crucial. First, Neil is more shallow. Benjamin plays him as simply a good-natured fellow with a big sexual urge, frustrated when Brenda opts for convention and her golden security. There is no sense of his growth from sex to love, of his wonder at it and his connecting it, even dimly, with the deep mysteries of human life and the search (somewhere) for God. These qualities enrich Roth's hero, and make him much more suitable as a moral critic of the Patimkins.

It is important to both story and theme that the young lovers are powerfully attracted and gleefully enjoy sex, right in the middle of the Patimkin home, so strangely dedicated to every pleasure but sex. But Roth simply mentions it, while the film is single-mindedly full of bedroom gymnastics, tipping showers, swims in the buff, etc. None of these scenes are pornographic, but all together they give the film a gee-whissex tone that is both unnecessary and juvenile.

There is easy comparison with "The Graduate": the similar value conflict, the light-hearted frank sex, the hero's attempt to free his beloved from the enchanted castle of affluence. But "Columbus" is much closer to real life in setting and character, much less an obvious spoof to youth. Its targets are broader and more complex, its methods subtler, and its solutions more honest. It makes "Andy Hardy Goes to Berkeley." Even so, "Columbus" is hardly a work of mature genius.

Benjamin's easy-going performance is, for all its limitations, extremely likable, and Miss MacGraw, a Wellesley girl playing a Radcliffe girl, is adequate. But the guy who nearly steals it all is Michael Meyer, whose understated portrait of Brenda's abusive brother is delightfully fresh and absurd. His conversation is limited to a hearty "hi" and mainly handshakes, his emotional life to endless playing of his record collection, chiefly Mantovani and a gushing tribute to the glories of alma mater Ohio State. He is "nice" in the worst way, but one really wonders if this genial ape is all that much worse than Neil.

Heads new body for diaconate

WASHINGTON — Father William Philbin, a priest of the archdiocese of Chicago, has been named executive director of the newly established Secretariat for the Bishops' Committee on the Permanent Diaconate.

The secretariat will be located with other NCCB offices and secretariats at 1312 Massachusetts Avenue, N.W., in this city.

Priests' seminar on counseling set at hospital

INDIANAPOLIS — "Hospital Calling" for Catholic priests will be the topic of a seminar to be conducted at Community Hospital at 12:30 p.m., Monday, June 9.

The seminar is being sponsored by the Chaplaincy Department of Community Hospital and Our Lady of Fatima Council 3228, Knights of Columbus.

The Rev. W. S. Hoggett, chaplain at Community, said that Dr. John I. Nurnberger, professor and chairman, Department of Psychiatry, Indiana University Medical Center, will talk on "The Changing Role of the Psychiatrist-Patient-A Psychiatrist's View."

Father Thomas More Newbold, C.P., Catholic Theological Union, Chicago, will talk on "The Changing Role of the Priest in Hospital Calling."

Mr. Hoggett said that the luncheon meeting is the first of several such seminars to be scheduled to bring clergymen the latest scientific and theological attitudes on counseling of the sick and injured.

TO OBSERVE GOLDEN WEDDING—Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Schantz will celebrate their Golden Wedding Anniversary Sunday, June 1, with a Mass of Thanksgiving at 2 p.m., at St. Paul Church, New Mass, Ind. The Mass will be offered by a nephew, Father Ralph Zinser, O.F.M., who will be celebrating his Silver Jubilee in Cincinnati on June 8. An Open House will be held in the parish hall, for all relatives and friends, following the Mass, until 5:30 p.m. No other invitations will be issued. It is the wish of the celebrating couple that gifts be omitted. Mr. and Mrs. Schantz have six children: four daughters, Irene Wad of Cincinnati, Grace Buram also of Cincinnati, Bette Schuler of Lawrenceburg, Vera Ahau of Yorkville, and two sons, John Schantz of Yorkville and Ralph Schantz of Lawrenceburg. They have thirteen grandchildren.

ST. BRIDGET'S HOSTS FIESTA—An Afro-American Fiesta involving the 125 pupils of St. Bridget's School, Indianapolis, last week-end featured art exhibits, one-act plays, poetry reading and dancing. "The fine arts festival with a black theme was a result of the faculty's effort to direct and en-

Both plays were given by fifth through eighth grade pupils. In the last photo, fifth grader Clay Moore admires an art display in the school basement. The festival attracted patrons throughout last week-end.

'USING FRONT GROUP'

Scores Birch Society role in sex education hassle

WASHINGTON—The director of the Family Life Division, United States Catholic Conference, charged that "The John Birch Society and other reactionary groups are gravely irresponsible in promoting a controversy over sex education."

"They are focusing on isolated incidents that any knowledgeable person would recognize as wrong, and are unjustly characterizing these incidents as normal aspects of any sex education program," Father James T. McHugh stated.

Father McHugh's comments were made after news reports that the Birch Society was using a front group called "Movement to Restore Decency" to propagate anti-sex education programs in the nation's schools, and had claimed that communists were behind such programs.

"There is no foundation whatsoever to the charge that sex education is part of the communist conspiracy to overthrow the country," Father McHugh said. He added that the charge made by some groups that all sex education is pornographic "indicates a very limited understanding of human sexuality."

FATHER McHUGH recently announced the Family Life Division had established a Task Force on Sex Education to set up program materials and evaluate those already in existence for sex education in Catholic schools.

He expressed conviction at the time that most parents favor sound programs in sex education in the schools, acknowledging that some parents have been put off by observation of ill-founded attempts at sex education by poorly prepared teachers and others have been prejudiced by groups which see sex education as part of a sinister conspiracy.

"I find it hard to believe that the John Birch Society is concerned about the rights of parents, because well-intentioned parents are victimized by this foolish controversy," Father McHugh said. "In my experience, and in that of our family life bureaus around the country, the general attitude of parents is that they recognize their responsibility to provide education in sexuality, and they seek help from the Church and other community agencies in preparing themselves to meet this responsibility. They welcome the help of the school, provided teachers are given competent training and that they will be given a chance to understand and discuss the type of program that is proposed," he stated.

Alonzo Watsford named for high K of C honor

FORT WAYNE, Ind.—Arthur V. Philon of Mishawaka was re-elected to a second term as state deputy of the Indiana Knights of Columbus at the Knights' 68th annual convention held here May 15-18.

Other convention highlights included the naming of Alonzo Watsford of Indianapolis for the Catholic Lay Action award; Albert Martin Jr., Gary, for the Youth Leadership award, and Stephen B. Provost, Evansville, state oratorical contest winner.

Provost presented his winning speech titled "Christian Youth and Vatican II, or What the Vatican Council Will Mean to Me in the Future."

The three awards were presented at the Saturday evening convention banquet at which the main speaker was James Neagle, Indianapolis, Agent in Charge for the FBI. Neagle's topic was the training of police officers and the proposed state training academy for law enforcement officers.

STATE officers elected to serve with Philon are Lawrence P. McFadden, Jeffersonville, secretary; Joseph F. Krueyer, South Bend, treasurer; Richard B. Scheiber, Huntington, advocate; and Hugh J. Davey, Frankfort, Warden. All were re-elected except Davey, who replaced Louis W. Wanstath, Batesville, as warden.

St. plus X council 3433, Indianapolis, won three state awards in addition to being named outstanding council in the large council division and having the outstanding general program chairman.

Edward J. LaBelle of St. Plus X was the outstanding chairman, and other awards won by the council included those for programs in youth, Tim McGlynn, chairman; membership, Gus Wiesinger, chairman, and

Raps Franco hand in appointments

TOLEDO, Spain — The vice-chairman of the Spanish Bishops' Conference has confirmed that the government is hampering the appointment of bishops.

Cardinal Vicente Enrique y Tarancón of Toledo told about 100 of his priests at a meeting at the major seminary here that the Holy See is deeply concerned with the government's procedures, and that several sees remain vacant because the names of candidates "take too long" to reach Rome, and some never make it.

Negotiations are now under way between the Holy See and the government of Gen. Francisco Franco to revise certain provisions of the 1953 concordat.

"But before any community goes into it, the schools ought to work with the community and parents," Allen stated. "The biggest problem in sex education is not the children, but the parents. People get blind spots when they talk about this. They think it's sinister."

MEANWHILE an official of the National Education Association said an "organized attack" on sex education is underway in at least 27 states, including New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

About one-third of U.S. Catholic dioceses now have some form of sex education programs in their parochial schools. The four dioceses in New Jersey have a statewide school program of sex education.

Reed Benson, spokesman for the John Birch Society, denied the organization had used improper tactics in combatting school sex education. He said the society believed in getting "sex education out of the schools and into the homes," where it belongs.

Churches closed to back priest

FORTALEZA, Brazil — The archdiocese of Fortaleza ordered all its churches to close for two days to protest the one-year prison sentence given a priest by a military court.

The priest, Father Geraldo Bonfim, was jailed because one of his sermons was said to have defamed the Brazilian armed forces. He is now being held in Fortaleza army hospital.
